

Using ground target calculate the coordinates of the ranging station chengkaizhou

The coordinates of the ranging station are very important in the scientific application of laser ranging. Common measurement methods include satellite ranging data resolution and geodetic survey. This poster shows a method for calculating the coordinates of a ranging station using a combination of ground targets and GNSS. The influence of different GNSS positioning accuracy on the calculation results is simulated and analyzed.